

Where is the most hazardous job location?

You are more likely to get injured at your customer site than anywhere else. Don't assume hazards won't be fixed; assume they will if the right person knows about them. Report hazardous conditions at your customer site.

You don't want to get hurt on the job. At the same time, you want to maintain professional relationships with your customers, so having a company policy on hazard reporting to customers is important. Talk to your safety manager about setting one up. Report hazards so that work can get done safely and efficiently.

Make the wise decision to protect your body and your career. Report hazards.

 Follow on Twitter @TruckSafe

www.KeepTruckingSafe.org